PREFACE

THIS is not a bibliography of every work of local authorship, or of all books printed within the district. Its scope is limited, as its title expresses, to a single branch of our literature. While it may prove useful to the reader and collector, the aim of the compiler has been to facilitate historical study and research by compressing for easy reference notes of as many sources of information as the space at disposal would contain. The subject lists are not exhaustive, although no important work has been omitted. All the books, unless otherwise noted, have been published in Aberdeen, and with few exceptions they may be consulted at the University Library.

Many of the works recommended for general reference are those of annalists born and educated within the shires, to whom, from the days of Barbour, the national history has been continuously indebted. The local roll of fame is much too extensive for inclusion, but the county biographies by the Rev. W. B. R. Wilson in "Scottish Notes and Queries," William Anderson's "Scottish Nation," the "Dictionary of National Biography," Frederic Boase's "Modern English Biography," and other kindred collections are easily accessible.

It will be observed that several books of a comprehensive character are twice noted, a redundancy due to the separate preparation and publication of the lists for city and counties. Following two earlier editions, the city bibliography was published in the Aberdeen University Library Bulletin, i, 699-738. The bibliography of the counties first appeared in the Bulletin, ii, 73-120, and 301-382. It was thought best to adhere to the original plan of the works as closely as possible, but both have been revised for this united edition.

VI. THE PRINTER

[The inestimable art of printing was introduced to Scotland at the direct instance of William Elphinstone, bishop of Aberdeen, founder of the university (1494), who required class and service books for his students and clergy. Probably the first book to pass through the press of Andro Myllar at Edinburgh, 1507, was a Scoto-Latin Rudimenta by John Vaus, professor of humanity, of which only a single leaf has been preserved in the University library. Ten leaves of poems by William Dunbar printed by Myllar from the same imperfect fount of Gothic type are preserved in a volume in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. Early in 1508, with the accession of a larger and better fount, Walter Chepman and Andro Myllar issued many books from their press, two of which, with fragments of seven others are bound up in the same volume. Among these relics are four leaves of The Buke of Gude Counsale to the King how to reull his realme, attributed to Bishop Elphinstone, and three leaves of The Porteous of Noblenes, by Andrew Cadiou, Aberdonensis, laureated M.A. at Paris, 1472, burgess of Aberdeen, 1480, who practised in his native city for many years as a notary and forespeaker (advocate). Bishop Elphinstone's Breviary of Aberdeen, 2 vols., was finished at the press of Walter Chepman, Edin. 1510. The story is partly told in the undernoted works of Dickson and Edmond.]

VII. PERIODICAL LITERATURE

Almanacs

A New Prognostication for the year of our Lord 1623 . . . Aberdeen, printed by Edward Raban for David Melvill. 1623.

The Aberdeen almanac and northern register for 1914. Printed at the Aberdeen Daily Journal Office. Annual issue : current.

[The earliest and latest issues of the oldest periodical in Europe, published annually by Edward Raban and his successors in the business established here in 1622. Within comparatively few years the almanac acquired an astonishing reputation, its fame becoming a bye-word throughout Scotland, and by 1677 the average annual circulation was 50,000 copies, "in that age a surprising number," said Dr. Joseph Robertson in an historical notice in the "Edinburgh Almanac" of 1838. Its success induced piracy by the printers of Edinburgh and Glasgow, who, on the application of John Forbes, the Aberdeen printer, were inhibited by the Privy Council in 1684. But counterfeits, omitting the Aberdeen city arms and imprint, increased and multiplied, and one of them, begun by James Watson, Edin. 1708, bearing to be edited by Merry Andrew at Tamtallon Castle, continued to be issued at all events until 1794. James Nicol (1710-36), by issuing editions simultaneously in Aberdeen and Edinburgh, somewhat discomfited the metropolitan pirates. He also adopted the method of printing the almanac as a broad sheet, one side only, part of the edition being folded and stitched as a booklet of 24 leaves. This was continued by James Chalmers, his successor, and by his son, James Chalmers the second, who introduced the large and important addition of national and local public lists in 1771. The broad-sheet system was continued until 1789, and the Chalmers press also issued a chapbook edition, examples of which, resembling those of the seventeenth century, are extremely rare. Writing from Edinburgh, 7 Dec., 1786, to his friend, Gavin Hamilton of Mauchline, Robert Burns, humorously alluding to his own successes, remarks, "You may expect to see my birthday inserted among the wonderful events in Poor Robin's and Aberdeen Almanacks". The fame of the Aberdeen Almanac was never better deserved than at the present day, for one need but open its pages anywhere to perceive at once its completeness and importance as an historical record, and to mark with wonder the contrast between the four unnumbered leaves of its humble first issue of 290 years ago and the 452 pages of the current edition.]
